Institutionalization of arbitration

1288. SHRI RAJIV SHUKLA: Will the Minister of LAW AND JUSTICE be pleased to state:

whether it is a fact that Government are planning to institutionalize arbitration by involving top members of bar and bench;

if so, the details thereof; whether Government believe this action would speed up the arbitration process; if so, the reasons therefor; and the details of the other steps being contemplated by Government to speed up arbitration?

THE MINISTER OF LAW AND JUSTICE (SHRI H.R. BHARDWAJ): (a) and (b) Yes, sir. The Departmental Related Parliamentary Standing Committee on Personnel, Public Grievances, Law & Justice which examined the Arbitration and Conciliation (Amendment) Bill, 2003 introduced in Rajya Sabha on 22nd December, 2003 in its Ninth Report presented to Rajya Sabha on 4th August, 2005 recommended a legislation incorporating provisions relating to institutionalized arbitration. The Committee felt that institutionalised arbitration would end the alleged enethical practice followed by some institutions as at present. This will also bring in accountability of arbitrators and committed people to conclude the arbitration proceedings in a time bound manner failing which there could be penalty for delay in settlement of disputes.

(c) to (e) Yes, Sir. Institutionalised arbitration will bring in fully dedicated panel of lawyers and arbitrators devoting full time for arbitration proceedings. It will also considerably reduce delay in settlement of disputes occurring at present due to availability of arbitrators and arbitration lawyers only on a part time basis. The Government considers that mediation, conciliation, fast tract courts, lok adalats, etc., would also pave way for early resolution of disputes besides institutionalized arbitration proceedings.
